Selection Criteria & Judging Process

The HealthTechX Awards are operated by IBIS Capital which applies a framework to assess applicants on a set of qualitative and quantitative criteria to identify a shortlist of candidates. IBIS engages a panel of experts to review this shortlist and input their independent opinion prior to establishing each year's winners.

Applicants will be considered across two award categories based on the company growth stage:

- The Innovator Award – Less than $10M USD revenue
- The Growth Award – Greater than $10M USD revenue

Companies will be assessed based on the qualitative and quantitative elements of the application. The selection will be determined on the strength of the application, completeness of the answers and supporting documents provided by candidates to consider the financial position, strength of business model, strategic milestones and overall trajectory of the company.

Confidentiality & Data Protection

IBIS Capital treats application information with the highest degree of confidentiality and will not share any sensitive information, including financial, to the public domain. For over 10 years, IBIS has collected sensitive information, including application submission data for its awards from companies across the world.

The financial information submitted via the application will be part of the assessment criteria and we therefore urge applicants to provide as much information as possible. Please contact hello@healthtechx.com should you have any concerns.
